Thousand Oaks Reads is a citywide program sponsored by the City of Thousand Oaks Library and many generous community partners

WELCOME

It is my pleasure to welcome you to the fourth annual Thousand Oaks Reads — One City One Book. The Thousand Oaks Library is proud to host this citywide book club where our community joins together in reading and discussing a fine work of literature. Check out a copy from the library and get involved! Talk about the book with your family, neighbors and friends. Attend the community book discussions, enjoy the variety of special events, and spend an afternoon with the author.

When we open a book together, we close it in greater harmony.

Stephen R. Brogden, Director of Library Services

ABOUT THE BOOK

Olivia Harker Cross owns a mountain, or thinks she does, in Pope County, Kentucky, a land where wolves — Olivia's wolves — howl in the night. But now someone is killing the wolves of Big Foley Mountain, and Olivia is beginning to realize how much of her own bitter history she's never fully understood. This proud, lonely woman will face her mother and daughter, her neighbors, and the wolf hunters. When she does, she ignites a conflict that embroils an entire community — and transforms her own life in the most surprising ways.

This Depression-era story is a Library Journal Best 2008 Fiction award winner. Reminiscent of To Kill a Mockingbird, it is a haunting mystery, a love story and a powerful rumination on secrets, bigotry and devotion.

Sweeping Up Glass is appropriate for high school students. A list of companion titles for younger readers can be found at www.thousandoaksreads.org

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Carolyn Wall is a writer, editor and lecturer. She conducts writing workshops on university campuses, in her home, and at conference centers across the country. As an Artist-in-Residence for the Oklahoma Arts Council, she has taught creative writing to over 4,000 children in her home state.

Ms. Wall served as the Fiction Editor for ByLine Magazine and Senior Staff Writer for Persimmon Hill, the award-winning publication of the National Cowboy and Western Heritage Museum. Her stories, articles, photographs and reviews have appeared in over 100 magazines and newspapers. In 1995, she wrote for and edited the book Braced Against The Wind, the only literary history of the Oklahoma City bombing.

The recipient of regional and national writing honors, Carolyn Wall has twice received the Creme-de-la-Creme award from the Oklahoma Writers' Federation, Inc. She was awarded a Devils Tower writing residency from the U.S. Department of the Interior and from Wyoming's Bearlodge Writers.

Ms. Wall is currently working on her next novel, The Coffin Maker. She and her husband live in Oklahoma City.
